

AMUSEMENTS.

Romeo and Juliet This Evening—The Grand and Lyric Filled to Overflowing.

Tonight and tomorrow night the tragique opera, Romeo and Juliet, will be presented at the Theater by the Orpheus club, under the direction of W. L. Haskell. Those who attend the performances are sure of an enjoyable entertainment.

To Old Kentucky is the bill at the Theater on Thursday and Friday evenings.

Mr. Charles Osgood, the advanced agent of Mr. Hins' 1892 company, is in the city. He is delighted with the success of the play on the road, the engagement of the Highwin theater, San Francisco, having been a brilliant one. 1892 is a combination of comic opera, farce and burlesque, intermixed with satire, mirth and laughter. The operations include the original Kilby's living pictures. The engagement of the Theater continues on Monday, Jan. 16, and covers three nights. Seats will be on sale Friday morning at the box office.

AT THE GRAND.

Standing room was at a premium at the Grand last night, and well it might be, for the play, The Silver Linings, is one that merits a large attendance. Dealing mainly with the minor queen, with love, and resulting ultimately to a victory for the white metal, it awakens the sympathies of the Western people and elicits applause at frequent intervals.

The main roles of the piece are James Rhine, a tramp known as "Dusty" and Kate Overman, the schoolmistress. The former was ably handled by Mr. Edwards. "Dusty" at one time was a successful medical man, but subsequently adopted "it rich" and comes to the rescue of those few who were his friends in the hours of adversity. His dress, however, as a tramp was somewhat ridiculous. Miss Madge Clegg-Osma performed creditably in the rôle of a schoolmistress, and in the second act, where she gives the Baron a scathing rebuke and shows him up in his true colors, the audience simply went wild. Mr. Osgood as John Osgood, an Illinois country doctor, and a weak work for congressional honors, renders his part in the usual characteristic style, and butts a little embarrassment in the third act, did exceedingly well. George H. Edison was in his element as Bill Jefferson. The comedy, however, with Mr. Cooke, as the president, while the Farmers and Merchants bank, performed their abiliment with good grace. Baron Theodore Rothman, an English financier, representing the West, and Mrs. Clegg-Osma presented the rôle of Daisy Bellwood, the part assigned to Miss Paton, who did not appear. The curtain call was a success. Harry Hattaway did very well as the workingman. George Fontaine made his first appearance at the Grand last night. His role was that of the sheriff of Pike county. The play continues during the week.

Mrs. Edith Pollock, it was learned last night, leaves for the East on the 20th to join her husband in New York, who has now recovered from his recent attack of illness.

AT THE LYRICAL.

For lack of seating capacity the Lyreco management very reluctantly had to turn away business last night on the occasion of Harry Corson's first effort at the管理 of the West side house. The Zoo's Whoopee was one hundred strong, occupied front seats on both sides of the house, their chub banner showing up prominently in use of the occasion. Clark represented by some means, was the only one in this city. Miss Warren of Virginia Ross was well received, as was also Miss Jerome, who assumed the rôle of Daisy Bellwood, the part assigned to Miss Paton, who did not appear. The curtain call was a success. Harry Hattaway did very well as the workingman. George Fontaine made his first appearance at the Grand last night. His role was that of the sheriff of Pike county. The play continues during the week.

Mrs. Edith Pollock, it was learned last night, leaves for the East on the 20th to join her husband in New York, who has now recovered from his recent attack of illness.

At the Lyrum.

An old and respected citizen of the Second ward, Brother Josiah Hardwick, died in spite of heart failure on Wednesday last, which caused his death. He was playing with one of his grandchildren when it was observed that he suddenly straightened out on his chair and his face assumed a grayish cast. He was immediately laid on his bed, and two physicians were called in. Dr. J. W. Johnson, Dr. C. C. Clegg-Osma and Dr. Clegg-Osma appointed the twice standing committee. Company C of the G. G. U. S. its lieutenant, F. A. Newberger, asked that the city pay the rent of the armory. The master was referred to the finance committee. It was agreed that we would make arrangements to resettle the present city attorney, but it is believed he will appoint a successor. The first regular meeting of the council will be held January 11th, when other appointments may be made.

Who are about to depart on missions, The exodus begins at 7:30. The program is as follows:

ENTERTAINMENT.
Baptist Churchmen, Master Peter and Lydia Clegg-Osma, Mr. George Clegg-Osma, Mrs. Mary Kirkland, Miss Anna Dwyer.

Miss Mary Anne, Misses Jessie Carter, Mrs. F. M. Nichols, Miss Freda French, Mrs. Anna Clegg-Osma.

Music—THEATRE SINGER.
Mrs. Anna Clegg-Osma.

Play—DRAMA. Misses Jessie Carter, Mrs. Anna Clegg-Osma.

Personal Paragraphs.

John Thomas, of Park City, is at the Hotel.

John Harting, of Chicago, is at the Hotel.

Carroll Schmid and wife, of Peoria, are summer visitors.

Major Samuel Orms, of Tooele City, is at the Hotel.

P. H. Remond and wife, of San Francisco, are summer visitors.

E. E. Clark and James McCoy, of Murray, are staying at the Hotel.

W. C. Stevens is down from Logan and is staying at the Hotel.

Miss Parsons, daughter of C. H. Parsons, left home today for San Francisco.

J. A. Woodward and M. M. Gleason, of Ogden, are registered at the Hotel.

W. P. McMillan, general agent for the Burlington, is expected from the East this evening.

James Thompson and A. L. Whitmer are among the summer visitors.

H. M. Allgood and wife and A. H. Clegg-Osma are among the guests at the Hotel.

The main roles of the piece are James Rhine, a tramp known as "Dusty" and Kate Overman, the schoolmistress. The former was ably handled by Mr. Edwards. "Dusty" at one time was a successful medical man, but subsequently adopted "it rich" and comes to the rescue of those few who were his friends in the hours of adversity. His dress, however, as a tramp was somewhat ridiculous. Miss Madge Clegg-Osma performed creditably in the rôle of a schoolmistress, and in the second act, where she gives the Baron a scathing rebuke and shows him up in his true colors, the audience simply went wild. Mr. Osgood as John Osgood, an Illinois country doctor, and a weak work for congressional honors, renders his part in the usual characteristic style, and butts a little embarrassment in the third act, did exceedingly well. George H. Edison was in his element as Bill Jefferson. The comedy, however, with Mr. Cooke, as the president, while the Farmers and Merchants bank, performed their abiliment with good grace. Baron Theodore Rothman, an English financier, representing the West, and Mrs. Clegg-Osma presented the rôle of Daisy Bellwood, the part assigned to Miss Paton, who did not appear. The curtain call was a success. Harry Hattaway did very well as the workingman. George Fontaine made his first appearance at the Grand last night. His role was that of the sheriff of Pike county. The play continues during the week.

Mrs. Edith Pollock, it was learned last night, leaves for the East on the 20th to join her husband in New York, who has now recovered from his recent attack of illness.

At the Lyrum.

John Thomas, of Park City, is at the Hotel.

John Harting, of Chicago, is at the Hotel.

Carroll Schmid and wife, of Peoria, are summer visitors.

Major Samuel Orms, of Tooele City, is at the Hotel.

P. H. Remond and wife, of San Francisco, are summer visitors.

E. E. Clark and James McCoy, of Murray, are staying at the Hotel.

W. C. Stevens is down from Logan and is staying at the Hotel.

Miss Parsons, daughter of C. H. Parsons, left home today for San Francisco.

J. A. Woodward and M. M. Gleason, of Ogden, are registered at the Hotel.

W. P. McMillan, general agent for the Burlington, is expected from the East this evening.

James Thompson and A. L. Whitmer are among the summer visitors.

H. M. Allgood and wife and A. H. Clegg-Osma are among the guests at the Hotel.

The main roles of the piece are James Rhine, a tramp known as "Dusty" and Kate Overman, the schoolmistress. The former was ably handled by Mr. Edwards. "Dusty" at one time was a successful medical man, but subsequently adopted "it rich" and comes to the rescue of those few who were his friends in the hours of adversity. His dress, however, as a tramp was somewhat ridiculous. Miss Madge Clegg-Osma performed creditably in the rôle of a schoolmistress, and in the second act, where she gives the Baron a scathing rebuke and shows him up in his true colors, the audience simply went wild. Mr. Osgood as John Osgood, an Illinois country doctor, and a weak work for congressional honors, renders his part in the usual characteristic style, and butts a little embarrassment in the third act, did exceedingly well. George H. Edison was in his element as Bill Jefferson. The comedy, however, with Mr. Cooke, as the president, while the Farmers and Merchants bank, performed their abiliment with good grace. Baron Theodore Rothman, an English financier, representing the West, and Mrs. Clegg-Osma presented the rôle of Daisy Bellwood, the part assigned to Miss Paton, who did not appear. The curtain call was a success. Harry Hattaway did very well as the workingman. George Fontaine made his first appearance at the Grand last night. His role was that of the sheriff of Pike county. The play continues during the week.

Mrs. Edith Pollock, it was learned last night, leaves for the East on the 20th to join her husband in New York, who has now recovered from his recent attack of illness.

At the Lyrum.

John Thomas, of Park City, is at the Hotel.

John Harting, of Chicago, is at the Hotel.

Carroll Schmid and wife, of Peoria, are summer visitors.

Major Samuel Orms, of Tooele City, is at the Hotel.

P. H. Remond and wife, of San Francisco, are summer visitors.

E. E. Clark and James McCoy, of Murray, are staying at the Hotel.

W. C. Stevens is down from Logan and is staying at the Hotel.

Miss Parsons, daughter of C. H. Parsons, left home today for San Francisco.

J. A. Woodward and M. M. Gleason, of Ogden, are registered at the Hotel.

W. P. McMillan, general agent for the Burlington, is expected from the East this evening.

James Thompson and A. L. Whitmer are among the summer visitors.

H. M. Allgood and wife and A. H. Clegg-Osma are among the guests at the Hotel.

The main roles of the piece are James Rhine, a tramp known as "Dusty" and Kate Overman, the schoolmistress. The former was ably handled by Mr. Edwards. "Dusty" at one time was a successful medical man, but subsequently adopted "it rich" and comes to the rescue of those few who were his friends in the hours of adversity. His dress, however, as a tramp was somewhat ridiculous. Miss Madge Clegg-Osma performed creditably in the rôle of a schoolmistress, and in the second act, where she gives the Baron a scathing rebuke and shows him up in his true colors, the audience simply went wild. Mr. Osgood as John Osgood, an Illinois country doctor, and a weak work for congressional honors, renders his part in the usual characteristic style, and butts a little embarrassment in the third act, did exceedingly well. George H. Edison was in his element as Bill Jefferson. The comedy, however, with Mr. Cooke, as the president, while the Farmers and Merchants bank, performed their abiliment with good grace. Baron Theodore Rothman, an English financier, representing the West, and Mrs. Clegg-Osma presented the rôle of Daisy Bellwood, the part assigned to Miss Paton, who did not appear. The curtain call was a success. Harry Hattaway did very well as the workingman. George Fontaine made his first appearance at the Grand last night. His role was that of the sheriff of Pike county. The play continues during the week.

Mrs. Edith Pollock, it was learned last night, leaves for the East on the 20th to join her husband in New York, who has now recovered from his recent attack of illness.

At the Lyrum.

John Thomas, of Park City, is at the Hotel.

John Harting, of Chicago, is at the Hotel.

Carroll Schmid and wife, of Peoria, are summer visitors.

Major Samuel Orms, of Tooele City, is at the Hotel.

P. H. Remond and wife, of San Francisco, are summer visitors.

E. E. Clark and James McCoy, of Murray, are staying at the Hotel.

W. C. Stevens is down from Logan and is staying at the Hotel.

Miss Parsons, daughter of C. H. Parsons, left home today for San Francisco.

J. A. Woodward and M. M. Gleason, of Ogden, are registered at the Hotel.

W. P. McMillan, general agent for the Burlington, is expected from the East this evening.

James Thompson and A. L. Whitmer are among the summer visitors.

H. M. Allgood and wife and A. H. Clegg-Osma are among the guests at the Hotel.

The main roles of the piece are James Rhine, a tramp known as "Dusty" and Kate Overman, the schoolmistress. The former was ably handled by Mr. Edwards. "Dusty" at one time was a successful medical man, but subsequently adopted "it rich" and comes to the rescue of those few who were his friends in the hours of adversity. His dress, however, as a tramp was somewhat ridiculous. Miss Madge Clegg-Osma performed creditably in the rôle of a schoolmistress, and in the second act, where she gives the Baron a scathing rebuke and shows him up in his true colors, the audience simply went wild. Mr. Osgood as John Osgood, an Illinois country doctor, and a weak work for congressional honors, renders his part in the usual characteristic style, and butts a little embarrassment in the third act, did exceedingly well. George H. Edison was in his element as Bill Jefferson. The comedy, however, with Mr. Cooke, as the president, while the Farmers and Merchants bank, performed their abiliment with good grace. Baron Theodore Rothman, an English financier, representing the West, and Mrs. Clegg-Osma presented the rôle of Daisy Bellwood, the part assigned to Miss Paton, who did not appear. The curtain call was a success. Harry Hattaway did very well as the workingman. George Fontaine made his first appearance at the Grand last night. His role was that of the sheriff of Pike county. The play continues during the week.

Mrs. Edith Pollock, it was learned last night, leaves for the East on the 20th to join her husband in New York, who has now recovered from his recent attack of illness.

At the Lyrum.

John Thomas, of Park City, is at the Hotel.

John Harting, of Chicago, is at the Hotel.

Carroll Schmid and wife, of Peoria, are summer visitors.

Major Samuel Orms, of Tooele City, is at the Hotel.

P. H. Remond and wife, of San Francisco, are summer visitors.

E. E. Clark and James McCoy, of Murray, are staying at the Hotel.

W. C. Stevens is down from Logan and is staying at the Hotel.

Miss Parsons, daughter of C. H. Parsons, left home today for San Francisco.

J. A. Woodward and M. M. Gleason, of Ogden, are registered at the Hotel.

W. P. McMillan, general agent for the Burlington, is expected from the East this evening.

James Thompson and A. L. Whitmer are among the summer visitors.

H. M. Allgood and wife and A. H. Clegg-Osma are among the guests at the Hotel.

The main roles of the piece are James Rhine, a tramp known as "Dusty" and Kate Overman, the schoolmistress. The former was ably handled by Mr. Edwards. "Dusty" at one time was a successful medical man, but subsequently adopted "it rich" and comes to the rescue of those few who were his friends in the hours of adversity. His dress, however, as a tramp was somewhat ridiculous. Miss Madge Clegg-Osma performed creditably in the rôle of a schoolmistress, and in the second act, where she gives the Baron a scathing rebuke and shows him up in his true colors, the audience simply went wild. Mr. Osgood as John Osgood, an Illinois country doctor, and a weak work for congressional honors, renders his part in the usual characteristic style, and butts a little embarrassment in the third act, did exceedingly well. George H. Edison was in his element as Bill Jefferson. The comedy, however, with Mr. Cooke, as the president, while the Farmers and Merchants bank, performed their abiliment with good grace. Baron Theodore Rothman, an English financier, representing the West, and Mrs. Clegg-Osma presented the rôle of Daisy Bellwood, the part assigned to Miss Paton, who did not appear. The curtain call was a success. Harry Hattaway did very well as the workingman. George Fontaine made his first appearance at the Grand last night. His role was that of the sheriff of Pike county. The play continues during the week.

Mrs. Edith Pollock, it was learned last night, leaves for the East on the 20th to join her husband in New York, who has now recovered from his recent attack of illness.

At the Lyrum.

John Thomas, of Park City, is at the Hotel.

John Harting, of Chicago, is at the Hotel.

Carroll Schmid and wife, of Peoria, are summer visitors.

Major Samuel Orms, of Tooele City, is at the Hotel.

P. H. Remond and wife, of San Francisco, are summer visitors.

E. E. Clark and James McCoy, of Murray, are staying at the Hotel.

W. C. Stevens is down from Logan and is staying at the Hotel.

Miss Parsons, daughter of C. H. Parsons, left home today for San Francisco.

J. A. Woodward and M. M. Gleason, of Ogden, are registered at the Hotel.

W. P. McMillan, general agent for the Burlington, is expected from the East this evening.

James Thompson and A. L. Whitmer are among the summer visitors.

H. M. Allgood and wife and A. H. Clegg-Osma are among the guests at the Hotel.

The main roles of the piece are James Rhine, a tramp known as "Dusty" and Kate Overman, the schoolmistress. The former was ably handled by Mr. Edwards. "Dusty" at one time was a successful medical man, but subsequently adopted "it rich" and comes to the rescue of those few who were his friends in the hours of adversity. His dress, however, as a tramp was somewhat ridiculous. Miss Madge Clegg-Osma performed creditably in the rôle of a schoolmistress, and in the second act, where she gives the Baron a scathing rebuke and shows him up in his true colors, the audience simply went wild. Mr. Osgood as John Osgood, an Illinois country doctor, and a weak work for congressional honors, renders his part in the usual characteristic style, and butts a little embarrassment in the third act, did exceedingly well. George H. Edison was in his element as Bill Jefferson. The comedy, however, with Mr. Cooke, as the president, while the Farmers and Merchants bank, performed their abiliment with good grace. Baron Theodore Rothman, an English financier, representing the West, and Mrs. Clegg-Osma presented the rôle of Daisy Bellwood, the part assigned to Miss Paton, who did not appear. The curtain call was a success. Harry Hattaway did very well as the workingman. George Fontaine made his first appearance at the Grand last night. His role was that of the sheriff of Pike county. The play continues during the week.

Mrs. Edith Pollock, it was learned last night, leaves for the East on the 20th to join her husband in New York, who has now recovered from his recent attack of illness.

At the Lyrum.

John Thomas, of Park City, is at the Hotel.

John Harting, of Chicago, is at the Hotel.

Carroll Schmid and wife, of Peoria, are summer visitors.

Major Samuel Orms, of Tooele City, is at the Hotel.

P. H. Remond and wife, of San Francisco, are summer visitors.

E. E. Clark and James McCoy, of Murray, are staying at the Hotel.

W. C. Stevens is down from Logan and is staying at the Hotel.

Miss Parsons, daughter of C. H. Parsons, left home today for San Francisco.

J. A. Woodward and M. M. Gleason, of Ogden, are registered at the Hotel.

W. P. McMillan, general agent for the Burlington, is expected from the East this evening.

James Thompson and A. L. Whitmer are among the summer visitors.

H. M. Allgood and wife and A. H. Clegg-Osma are among the guests at the Hotel.

The main roles of the piece are James Rhine, a tramp known as "Dusty" and Kate Overman, the schoolmistress. The former was ably handled by Mr. Edwards. "Dusty" at one time was a successful medical man, but subsequently adopted "it rich" and comes to the rescue of those few who were his friends in the hours of adversity. His dress, however, as a tramp was somewhat ridiculous. Miss Madge Clegg-Osma performed creditably in the rôle of a schoolmistress, and in the second act, where she gives the Baron a scathing rebuke and shows him up in his true colors, the audience simply went wild. Mr. Osgood as John Osgood, an Illinois country doctor, and a weak work for congressional honors, renders his part in the usual characteristic style, and butts a little embarrassment in the third act, did exceedingly well. George H. Edison was in his element as Bill Jefferson. The comedy, however, with Mr. Cooke, as the president, while the Farmers and Merchants bank, performed their abiliment with good grace. Baron Theodore Rothman, an English financier, representing the West, and Mrs. Clegg-Osma presented the rôle of Daisy Bellwood, the part assigned to Miss Paton, who did not appear. The curtain call was a success. Harry Hattaway did very well as the workingman. George Fontaine made his first appearance at the Grand last night. His role was that of the sheriff of Pike county. The play continues during the week.

Mrs. Edith Pollock, it was learned last night, leaves for the East on the 20th to join her husband in New York, who has now recovered from his recent attack of illness.

At the Lyrum.

John Thomas, of Park City, is at the Hotel.

John Harting, of Chicago, is at the Hotel.

Carroll Schmid and wife, of Peoria, are summer visitors.

Major Samuel Orms, of Tooele City, is at the Hotel.

P. H. Remond and wife, of San Francisco, are summer visitors.

E. E. Clark and James McCoy, of Murray, are staying at the Hotel.